REPLACEMENT OF CURB IS ORDERED BY CITY COUNCIL

At the regular meeting of the City Council last Monday evening, instructions were given to the city engineer to get in touch with the owner of the service station at Mission street and Theta avenue, and have him replace such parts of the curb and sidewalk as are necessary to remedy a very dangerous condition at this corner.

A communication was received from George Lombard, of 141 Flournoy street, who has a laundry route in Daly City, in regard to his being entitled to exemption from license on account of being an ex-service man. The matter was referred to the city attorney for a legal opinion.

A communication was received from the Pacific Gas and Electric Company, asking permission to excavate and lay a gas main in the parking space on Oliver street. This being a public necessity, permission was granted.

The Merchants' Association recommended that a sign reading "Daly City" be placed at Belle avenue and Junipero Serra boulevard. The recommendation was referred to the street committee.

A resolution ordering the abatement of weeds was passed.

A communication was received from the Merchants' Association, recommending that a business license be given Harry Apte to operate a cabinet shop at 6261 Mission street for a term of five years. Owing to the fact that the nature of the business for which the license is requested does not conform to the city zoning ordinance, the city clerk was instructed to notify the Merchants' Association that such was the case and that their request could not be complied with.

Several residents of Partridge Lane and Hanover street called the attention of the Council to a lack of street marking in that vicinity. The matter was taken under advisement.

The sale of fire-works in Daly City came up for discussion, and the City Council wants it understood that the ordinance forbidding the sale and discharge of fire-works in Daly City will be strictly enforced.

It was suggested that those seeking employment in cleaning up weeds should register at the water clerk's office, at the City Hall.

CITIZENS PLAN TO ASSIST BOY SCOUTS

At a meeting held in the City Hall last Tuesday evening, presided over by City Councilman A. J. Bodien, and attended by representatives from the Daly City Post American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Fraternal Order of Eagles, Daly City Firemen, Merchants' Association, and Boy Scouts, plans were outlined to sponsor the Boy Scouts of Daly City, and to do all possible to interest the community in the Boy Scout movement, and urge the boys to join the different troops in their own particular locality.

Another meeting was set for Tuesday evening, May 26, at the City Hall, at which time is is expected to have a national representative of the Boy Scouts to assist in completing arrangement toward the culmination of the plans outlined.

The consensus of opinion of those present was that every one in Daly City should interest themeslves in this movement, thereby encouraging the enlistment of our boys in the Boy Scouts, which would tend towards closer supervision and result in keeping the boys out of mischief and ultimately grow up to be law-abiding ctizens and a credit to the community.

AN INTERESTING PROGRAM AT THE METHODIST CHURCH

The Ladies' Aid of the Methodist church gave one of the finest entertainments they have had in a long time, on Friday evening of last week. Mrs. I. R. Bennett was chairman. The church is fortunate in having Mr. Stahl as pastor, as he is not only a good preacher, but a splendid entertainer, as is also Mrs. Stahl, his wife. They both gave a wonderful reading, full of humor, which kept the audience in gales of laughter. Then there was "Burlington Bertie from Bow," by Mrs. Robert Russell, another very humorous piece. Then a little bit of Scotch, by Mr. J. R. Bennett and Mr. J. McDonald Hay, on the bagpipes. Mrs. Smith, Mrs. W. Anderson and Mr. Stanley Lewis gave solos, and Miss Lottie Hay a piano solo, while Mr. Smith favored with a violin solo. Stanley Parmenter, Alois Lang and Homer Stahl played very nicely on the violin, piano and base horn. Mrs. Agnes Gowland was accompanist. The program was very much enjoyed by everyone present.

SCHOOL TRUSTEES DINE WITH GUESTS

One of the most delightful events in connection with the work of the board of trustees of the Jefferson Union high school took place on last Tuesday evening at the high school immediately following the regular monthly meeting of the board. Mrs. Stella Jensen and Mr. Andrew Vireno, the two newly elected members of the board, invited the other trustees to to meet in the teachers' lunch room for refreshments, and to bring along their "trailers." The occasion was to express appreciation of the cordial greeting which had been expressed to Mrs. Jensen and Mr. Vireno by the other trustees upon the results of the recent school election. Mrs. James Ferguson assisted Mrs. Jensen and Mr. Vireno in providing the refreshments.

Mr. R. L. Crane, the newly elected superintendent of Jefferson school district, and Mrs. Crane, were invited guests.

Principal Ferguson, as toastmaster, congratulated Mrs. Jensen and Mr. Vireno upon their re-election without opposition to the board because of the confidence in them which was thus expressed by the people of the entire district. But in a larger sense he wished to congratulate the Jefferson Union high school district upon the willingness of Mrs. Jensen and Mr. Vireno to continue to serve the district as school trustees. No higher service could be rendered by any citizen than in the capacity of school trustee, he said. The members of the Jefferson Union high school board worked with a harmony that was inspiring to the faculty and student body, and to the district as a whole. "It is a high standard of harmonious co-operation that might well be taken as an example to be followed by every other school board in California," he said.

In welcoming Superintendent and Mrs. Crane to Jefferson school district he said that he spoke not only for himself personally, but for the entire high school.

The toastmaster then called on the trustees and guests for remarks. Mrs. Jensen expressed her appreciation of the cordial greeting of the trustees upon her re-election, and of the compliment paid her by the electors in returning her to the board without opposition. She said it was a pleasure to work with members who were so unselfishly interested in rendering public service to the district, and especially where such service affected so vitally the welfare of the young people. She could conceive of no higher public service than that of providing adequate educational opportunities for the boys and girls who are to be the men and women of tomorrow, and whose personal lives will be determined very largely by the social and spiritual and educational environment which we create for them. It must be looked upon not only as a privilege to serve on a school board, she said, but as a tremendous responsibility. She complimented Mr. Ferguson, the principal, for the efficiency he had displayed in conducting the affairs of the school, and especially his willingness to co-operate with the board in carrying out its policies.

Mr. Vireno also expressed his appreciation of the cordial welcome accorded him by the other members of the board, and of the compliment paid him by the voters of the high school district. He said that he was interested in seeing the community grow through the attraction of good schools —that it would always be his desire to render the most efficient service possible for the children and the community at large.

Mr. Truman Bentley, president of the board, said he wished to express his personal satisfaction over the return of Mrs. Jensen and Mr. Vireno to the high school board. It was a pleasure to work with them in the performance of official duties, he said.

In welcoming Superintendent and Mrs. Crane to their new field of work, he paid a high compliment to Mr. Crane's predecessor, Mr. W. J. Savage. "No man who is loved as Mr. Savage was loved by the children of this community can be said to have lived in vain," he said. "Mr. Savage was the most universally loved man in the community."

Mr. Adolph Gehringer and Mrs. Lila Brown also welcomed the re-elected trustees and expressed their pleasure at the feeling of mutual confidence and co-operation which existed among the trustees. They also voiced a hearty welcome to the newly appointed superintendent of schools and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Crane.

Called upon by the toastmaster to tell of his first impressions of Daly City, Mr. Crane said they were most favorable. He had taught in the Jefferson school at Colma a number of years ago, and therefore was not

TENDERED FAREWELL PARTY

Mrs. V. Lombard was tendered a farewell surprise party by a number of her friends at the home of Mrs. M. I. Trier on Thursday evening, April 30. The guests included Mesdames Helen Grantham, Amy Yates, Masie Boyle, Minnie Joy, Ethel Adams, Minnie Bernardi, Jennie Johnson, Eloise Harrison, Catharine Foreman, Virginia Callsen, Stacy Meade, Lela Campbell, Caroline Blair, Grace Augustien, Jean O'Rourk, Charlotte Collins, Annie Smith, Lillian Landini, Dollie Putney, Mary Friman and Marce Trier. Cards were played during the evening, followed by delicious refreshments. At a late hour all departed for their homes, having convinced Mrs. Lombard of the sincerity of their wishes for a bon voyage on her trip to France.

FILLMORE NINE WINS THRILLER

Playing errorless ball behind Lefty Uhl's effective pitching, the Fillmore Merchants chalked up a well earned 9 to 8 victory over the Daly City Merchants last Sunday, on the Jefferson high school diamond.

The visitors obtained their single run margin by scoring five runs in the ninth inning to break a four all tie, and then stopped a Daly City rally after four men had crossed the plate. The visions of another extra inning game was very strong at this time.

Besides pitching a well balanced game for eight innings, Uhl brought in the winning score with a home run to cap the Fillmore team's rally. Lefty allowed twelve hits, issued seven walks and struck out ten men.

"Hayshaker" Thompson is charged with the defeat. He relieved Mitchell, Daly City' starting pitcher, in the sixth stanza, after Jim had four runs marked against him. Thompson got by with little trouble for three innings, but they hit everything he threw in the ninth, scoring five times on five bingles.

Bill Kretschmer, Fillmore's first-baseman, and George Rettig, local shortstop, divided batting honors for the day with four hits each in five times at bat. Both players collected a double and three singles.

Daly City will oppose the San Francisco Antler's nine next Sunday on the Jefferson diamond. This should be another of those thrilling tussles, such as tthe local fans have already witnessed.

POPULAR GIRL BECOMES BRIDE

Miss Verna Schmidt, daughter of Fred C. Smith, of Woodrow street, became the bride of Merle Sorg, of San Francisco, at a pretty home wedding at 8:30 Saturday night. The Rev. John R. Stevenson, of the Grace Presbyterian church, officiated. Only the immediate relatives of the bride and groom witnessed the ceremony. The home was artistically decorated for the occasion. A wedding supper was served later in the evening. The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Sorg join in wishing them much success and happiness. At present they are making their home with Mr. and Mr. F. Schmidt, of Woodrow street.

LEGION AUXILIARY INSTALLS OFFICERS

The meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary of Daly City Post No. 410, American Legion, on Friday evening, May 8, was featured by an installation of officers, followed by the presentation of the charter by Mrs. Mary Ann Holt, President of Area 2, Mrs. Pearl James, President of Districts 7 and 8, acting as marshal.

The members of the Post attended en masse as invited guests.

The newly installed officers are: President, Catharina Foreman; First Vice-President, Margaret Kenney; Second Vice-President, Virginia Callsen; Secretary, Sue Sanders; Treasurer, Eloise Harrison; Historian, Pearl Jones; Chaplain, Julia Jordan; Sergeant-at-Arms, Anna Dannenberg.

The big feature of the evening was the matter of eats. There was a most plentiful supply, and true to army tradition, every one present got in line for their share. Second and third helpings, of course, were in order, and an improvised G. I. can in the center of the room served as a receptacle for discarded mess-kits.

During the course of the evening there were a number of vocal and musical numbers, as well as a bit of exhibition dancing. Coupled with the fact that the hall was so appropriately decorated for the occasion, and that the true Legion spirit was so prevalent, the evening was certainly a huge success.

In the matter of horseshoe throwing, the prowess of the men has been challenged by the ladies, and last Sunday saw them on the courts, practicing with a vengeance. There was a sizeable audience, and in the near future there should be a contest that will be worth going miles to see. More power to the ladies.

The installation of the newly elected officers will take place on June 4.

MRS. L. LANDINI CHOSEN TO LEAD LADIES' HOME CLUB

A PRETTY CHURCH WEDDING

Last Sunday afternoon at 4:30, Miss Anna Tromberg, daughter of Mrs. Sam Peterson, of Mission Circle, became the bride of Mr. A. Bridahl, of San Francisco, the ceremony being performed in the Daly City Methodist church, the Rev. Roland C. Stahl officiating. The bride was fashionably dressed in a white gown, cut to the prevailing mode, and wore a close-fitting hat. The bridesmaid was Miss Dorothy Ingersol, who wore a yellow gown and hat to match. The groom was attended by J. King. After the pretty ceremony at the church a reception was held in the bride's home. Thirty guests were bidden to the affair.

MAN ENDS LIFE IN HILLS NEAR COLMA

The finding of the body of a man in the hills back of Colma, last Sunday, led to the belief for a time that he had been murdered. Following a complete investigation, however, Constable S. A. Landini and Mrs. Luella Pepper, deputy county coroner, declared themselves convinced that the man, R. D. Marush, had committed suicide.

When the body was found there was every indication that the suicide had made every effort to conceal his identity. All labels and means of identification had been torn from his clothing, except a belt buckle bearing the initial "M" and a laundry mark on a piece of canvas on which the body was lying when it was found. A letter, unsigned, but marked with fingerprints, was addressed to "The Police," and dated Saturday. It read:

"I am myself responsible for what I'm about to do. So please do not accuse anyone. These are my right fingerprints. Ill health forced me to do this. Goodbye. Please do not waste time to identify me. I am alone."

It was learned that Marush had complained of illness to C. F. Doran, a barber at 112 Third street, San Francisco. A laundry mark on the piece of canvas on which the body was lying when found was traced to this address, and Marush's signature on the book tallied with the handwriting in the note found on the body.

Marush was not employed, according to the barber. He lived at a hotel on Third street, San Francisco.

GETS FIVE DAYS IN JAIL FOR RECKLESS DRIVING

H. R. Mullens, of 2033 Irving street, San Francisco, was cited to appear before Judge Ellis C. Johnson on May 8, by order of Chief of Police John T. Doyle, upon a complaint sworn to by the high school authorities.

Mullens was charged with reckless driving. Judge Johnson imposed a fine of $25, or a sentence of five days in jail. The traffic offender chose the five days in jail rather than pay the $25 assessment.

Warning is issued to all motorists to obey the traffic law in the vicinity of schools. Drive slow! The chief of police wishes to be notified of any violations of the traffic laws.

Some choice stereopticon pictures will be shown of this great continent of the South.

The purpose of the meeing was to consider the financial reports of the various school organizations. It was decided to transfer from the school store fund a sufficient amount to balance the accounts of the Totem Pole and boys' athletics for the year. With the approval of Coach Biaggini, the baseball players will receive awards.

James Kennedy, sophomore, won the tennis championship among the boys, and his sister, a freshman, won the tennis champioship among the girls. Quite a family affair.

DALY CITY SUMMER ROUNDUP

Friday of last week the Daly City Well Baby Clinic held its second annual pre-school summer roundup, at the Clinic on Wellington avenue. Dr. Hildegarde Henderson was in charge, assisted by Mrs. E. Lohr, school nurse, Mrs. I. Alexander, Mrs. Boyle, Mrs. E. Page, Mrs. M. Woodside and Mrs. M. Hanselman.

The examination was planned for children who will enter school in the fall term. Sixty children were examined and were found in perfect health. Thirty-five were given toxin and anti-toxin. Every child about to enter school should be made physically fit for the new life upon which he is about to enter. Now is the most important time in his life, and the assurance of perfect health is an important duty of every parent. He will encounter new dangers in his contact with other children. A physical or mental defect which might hinder him from shouldering the new responsibilities should be corrected before his entrance to school.

UNVEIL TABLET IN HONOR OF MOTHER

With colorful and impressive ceremony, a bronze tablet of rare beauty was unveiled at Indianapolis, Indiana, on Sunday, commemorating the first known public appeal for a nation-wide observance of Mothers' day. The unveiling was by the Fraternal Order of Eagles, honoring Frank E. Hering, South Bend, Indiana, twice National President of the order. The tablet stands today in the English opera, where, on February 7, 1904, the appeal was uttered by Hering.

Boyd Gurley, editor of the Indianapolis Times, 1928 Pulitzer prize winner, and Robert E. Proctor, Elkhart, Indiana, present national head of the Eagles, were the principal speakers.

J. Pierce Cummings, lifelong friend of Hering, presided. Responding when Hering was introduced as the "Father of Mothers' Day," the Rev. John Cavanaugh, for twelve years president of the University of Notre Dame, paid a touching tribute to the author of the Mothers' day appeal and to motherhood. Hering was a student, trustee and professor of the university. He now heads its national alumni association.

The program of the day was in three parts. It opened with a parade in which marched many representatives of the 650,000 Eagles in the nation, and of other fraternal organizations, civic and military groups, and the American War Mothers. The latter organization in 1929 bestowed upon Hering a medal with a bar inscribed "Father of Mothers' Day." Otto P. Deluse, Indianapolis, former national Eagles president, was in charge of the unveiling as chairman of the tablet committee of the Indiana state Eagles aerie, other members being Mayor John B. Hudson, of Lafayette, Indiana, state president of the order; Ray C. Brock, Kokomo, past state president; Ernest E. Cloe, Noblesville, state secretary, and Dr. Fred C. Dilley, Brazil, chief medical examiner of the insurance department.

YOUNG PEOPLE PRESENT INTERESTING CARNIVAL

Last Tuesday evening the young people of Grace Presbyterian church enjoyed a carnival. It was an evening of sheer fun. A Marionette Show created an amusing diversion. All the old nursery rhymes were put on in Marionette form. A donkey, composed of Blodwin Hart and Evelyn Clark, sent the audience into spasms of laughter. The young people are already talking of rehearsing for another one in the near future.

Miss Irene Williams, president of the Epworth League of the Methodist church at Vista and Santa Barbara avenues, gave a bridal shower at her home on Tuesday evening of last week, in honor of Miss Anna Tromberg, of Mission Circle. After a delicious dinner the evening was spent in dancing. The guests departed wishing their hostess many more years of health and happiness.

Miss Eleanor Bodien, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Bodien, of Rice street, was hostess at a pajama party in her home last Friday evening. Don't forget the whist party and dance to be held at the Masonic Hall, Wednesday evening, June 17, by the members of the drill team of El Carmelo Parlor No. 181, N. D. G. W. The young ladies in charge of this affair are working hard to make it a huge success. It is an annual affair for the purpose of raising funds for expensees of the Admission day celebration. Every one ought to co-operate and help, as Daly City and Colma are the only cities in the county with such a drill team, and when this drill team turns out on Admission day they represent San Mateo county. At the 1926 Admission day celebration at Sacramento this home taem won first prize in competitive drilling, and in the 1929 Admission day celebration in Santa Cruz, also won first prize. As there are a number of drill teams throughout California, several alone in San Francisco, San Mateo county ought to be proud of their splendid representation.

PURCHASE HOMES IN DALY CITY

The Home Investment Company reports the following recent sales, made through George H. Hoag:

Alex Piel, a roofer purchased the home owned by R. G. Wahl, at 408 Westlake avenue.

J. L. Norton, owner of a battery station in San Francisco, bought the home owned by Mrs. Alice Cummings, at 251 Willits street.

R. L. Crane, Jr., new superintendent of the grammar schools of Daly City, has purchased the home at 140 Woodrow street, which was built by A. Saunier.

These sales, together with the numerous "live" inquiries that are coming into the office, make us feel that "Better Business" is fast becoming a fact.

Using a cane on the head of a neighbor woman to emphasize that he did not want the floor before his apartment door scrubbed, caused Rev. R. P. Doss, of Atlanta, Georgia, to be put under a $200 bond.

"The last of a $10,000 inheritance," was written on a one dollar bill received by Henry Hutchens, a grocer of Portland, Indiana.

Because he was served chicken soup without chicken, Louis Sikara, of Toledo, Ohio, stabbed his landlady.

altogether a stranger in the district. He liked the cool, bracing climate of Daly City, and looked forward with great pleasure to the opportunities which he would have for service here. "And I can assure Mr. Ferguson," he said, "that the fine spirit of co-operation shown by the high school towards the grammar schools will be shown by the entire grammar school department." Mr. Crane expressed his deep appreciation of the reception he had received and the warm welcome extended to him and Mrs. Crane by the high school board and other guests of the evening.

Mr. Jensen, who was called on to speak as one of the "trailers" and guests, emphasized the importance of physical appearance of the high school property and referred to the contemplated widening of Mission street with its probable effect upon the landscaping of the grounds. Referring to the subject of underpasses on Mision street, he said that no measure of safety was too great in protecting the lives of the school children. He said that his experience in noting accidents to people crossing the road near the cemeteries made him very strongly in favor of underpasses.

Other guests who were called upon and responded briefly were Mrs. Truman Bentley, Mrs. Andrew Vireno, Mrs. R. L. Crane, Mrs. Adolph Gehringer, Mrs. James Ferguson and Mr. Brown.

Mr. Bentley expressed the feelings of everybody present when he remarked: "If this evening's program is the result of a school election, I am in favor of more school elections."

CUBS TRIM ALEMITE NINE AT JEFFERSON

By HERMAN KALININ

In their initial appearance at Jefferson, the Jefferson Cubs defeated the Alemite nine by a score of 5 to 0, Sunday, May 10.

Creighton Davies, Jefferson star, pitched masterful ball, allowing only two hits and fanning nine batters.

The Cubs scored two runs in the second inning, one in the fourth, and two in the sixth.

Coach Biaggini and Tom Long proved to be the heavy hitters of the day. Tom hit a double in the second, and Biaggini a triple in the fourth.

The Cubs' infield was far from being weak. In the seven inning game they were able to make three double plays. The first one came in the third inning, Jaques to Johnston to Long. The second double play was the result of a beautiful catch made by Kelly at short certerfield. He threw the ball to first and picked a man off who was half way down to second. Biaggini and Gibbons were responsible for the best play of the game, which came in the seventh inning. Gamball singled to center. W. Gattle was fanned by Davies. Ciucci was safe on an error, and Crooks drew a base on balls, filling the bags with only one out. Antone then hit a fast one down third. Gibbons made a nice stop and whipped it home, getting the runner out by two feet. Then Biaggini, without losing a fraction of a second, threw the ball to first, getting the runner out and winning the ball game.

This Sunday the Jefferson Cubs will meet the Samarkand Ice Cream team, supposedly a very strong and experienced nine. The game is scheduled for 12 o'clock at Jefferson. Everyone is welcome.

THE DALY CITY THEATRE INAUGURATES CHINA NIGHT

To attend a photoplay and at the same time secure beautiful Chinaware of exquisite design and decoration is a combination which thrills local housewives this week.

The Daly City Theatre has inaugurated a new plan which will continue each Monday night, being known as "China Night." On these nights a piece of China will be given to every lady patron, and the plan will be continue each week over a period of sixty weeks—enabling those who attend regularly to complete their dinner service with an entire 60-piece China set.

This is a most novel and original plan which has met with immediate enthusiasm. Eager housewives who are particularly impressed with the beauty of this Chinaware and its lovely new pattern, see to it that their entire household makes a date for attendance at the Daly City Theatre on China night.

The pattern which has been adopted by the Daly City Theatre is decorated by the famous under-glazed process, making it absolutely permanent and guaranteeing against crazing. It carries a faithful reproduction of Carot's famous painting, "Souvenir De Mort Fontaine," and the set now displayed in the lobby of the theatre is attracting much favorable comment.

Angelo Martinez, of Los Angeles, suffered only a broken toe when he fell from a 40-foot smoke-stack.

★ BUILDERS OF CALIFORNIA

Grandfather scoffed when the Cement age was predicted

THE PROPHESY: "Colossal concrete dams will store water for cities and valleys. People will walk on concrete, ride over concrete roads and bridges, live and work in buildings constructed with cement.". . . . In Grandfather's time, a dreamer's vision. Today—The Age of Portland Cement.

Cement was first produced commercially in California only 33 years ago. Now the state's yearly output exceeds twelve million barrels, valued at more than $25,000,000.

With huge investments, large pay-rolls, wide distribution and seasonal "peaks" of demand—the cement manufacturer requires a strong, convenient, helpful bank.

Bank of America, financing thousands of construction projects throughout the state, knows the problems of builders and material men, and often has the privilege of assisting both. The contractor, the material company, the dealer and the owner may be at widely-separated points. But this Bank's statewide service brings them near together—frequently saving time and money for all.

With construction costs at the lowest level in years, conditions are now unusually favorable for building. You are invited to consult this Bank regarding the financing of a home or any building project.

BANK COMPLETES SURVEY OF STATE'S LAND RESOURCES

A thorough survey of California land resources, just completed by the Bank of America, indicates a distinct betterment in both the prices and the production future of general major agricultural and horticultural products and a renewed interest in mineral lands and their output.

Improvement has already set in to such an extent that the bank feels justified in stating that "prices on commodities where the product is below normal promises to be better than in 1930." The survey showed that the hop market has stiffened from four to six cents a pound in the past few weeks, bringing this product well over the point where production and marketing cost ends and profit begins; that hay has advanced by two or three dollars a ton in the last thirty days and that there will be an actual shortage in both hay and grain.

The survey sets forth that many buyers of agricultural lands have contacted the banks and finance companies within the past few months, and are appraising the desirable lands actively. These buyers are being given to understand that it is not likely that California agrarian acreage will go any lower in price. Land values apparently have shrunk to the limit, the survey points out. The inflated valuation placed on the inferior land in the state has virtually all disappeared, and all land is about at its true price level.

Oddly enough certain factors of the economic depression, coupled with the shortage of water and the scientific encouragement of volume production, have combined to bring about an actual betterment of conditions in many respects. The prune crop, it is indicated in the survey, may be as much as 40 per cent below normal in volume, obviating the market glut that prostrated prices in 1930 and allowing more latitude for quality production and more promising financial return. Lack of water may prevent a considerable portion of the peach crop from sizing up as it should, but in every other respect it is expected that the general fruit crop quality will be up to the normal standards. A somewhat shorter grape crop is predicted, due to the vine-pulling campaign and shortage of water and to the natural rotation of crops of different degrees of volume. The grape output for the past few seasons has been unusually heavy, and a lighter bearing season is now in prospect. The grape leaf hopper has also been more than usually active, and this factor is bound to cut production to some extent.

Both the cotton and the bean acreage have been reduced because of lack of adequate water. In addition the cotton growers have actively engaged themselves with the problem of low-productive land and in many instances have cut off this land to develop volume production on their remaining acreage. There will be a big crop of almonds, possibly above normal. The first cutting of hay has all been shipped out of the Imperial Valley and there is very little old hay to be obtained there. The alfalfa output everywhere is moving rapidly, stimulated by a good market.

The observation is made from this survey that agriculture in California is getting on a firmer basis because the holder of the land and the bank or finance company that finance it are beginning to realize the folly of throwing good money after bad in maintaining consistently low producing acreage. Much more remains to be done in this regard, the survey points out. Volume production on the good acreage and the turning over of the low production soil to other uses are the objectives that are being striven for. "Better a good pasture than a poor orchard," is one cogent suggestion that has been set forth in the survey.

While the livestock industry is not responding as well as some of the agricultural and horticultural commodities, the whole situation of land resources justifies the conclusion that conditions are more favorable here than is the case with many of the commodities and operations represented by stock market prices. Any true survey of the land resources situation in California must show many bright spots, and the fact that the present economic depression has forced certain readjustments that are actually resulting in present benefit.

While the bank's approximation of the land situation concerns itself almost solely with agricultural holdings, it was brought to the attention of the institution that renewed inquiry is stimulating the interest in mineral lands, particularly in the well proven holdings.

The facts in the survey were compiled by the agricultural field force of the bank.

A TRIBUTE TO SERVICE

In a recent address on the twenty-fifth anniversary of the San Francisco fire, William Butterworth, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, said:

"Fire insurance is a very essential part of American business. It constitutes an important foundation of credit, of industry, merchandising and of shipping. Today it protects 240 billion dollars worth of property. . . .

"When the home has been laid in ashes, insurance has provided the needed shelter and aided in building anew. When the property that has been accumulated, great or small, has been destroyed by flames, insurance has helped to make good the loss. Against practically all the destructive contingencies that assail life or property, health, or security against disaster, insurance is the ready and strong protector."

In other words, stock fire insurance is the cornerstone of all business, of all social and industrial existence and progress. Without the protection afforded by insurance, the modern world as we know it could not exist. The builder, the investor, the employer would be constantly facing a grave and ruinous hazard that could, in a few minutes time, wipe out the work of years. American and world civilization owe a tremndous debt to the institution of insurance.

WHY DO THEY CALL THEM BUDDIES?

Why do they call them Buddies?
What other name so sweet?
Has ever been war hallowed
By rain and snow and sleet?
What other name than Buddies
Would men like our men bear,
When all hell belched its baptisms
An death was everywhere?

Why do they call them Buddies?
Though not of common kin,
Old Glory called them brothers
When Freedom said "Go in!"
Then swept the mighty legions
To man land, sky and sea;
God, devil-dog and doughboy—
A fighting trinity!

Why do they call them Buddies?
Because they stand today,
Still Buddies to the Buddy
Left shattered by the fray.
Though peace may grow unmindful
Of war's unsettled debt,
The Buddy to a Buddy
Stands fast—and can't forget.

That's why they call them Buddies;
The shrapnel shriek is gone,
The Buddies carry on.
And so, tonight, heart happy,
I breathe this fervent prayer:
God make the way all roses
For Buddy Legionnaire.

ELECTRIFIED FARMS

In spite of the depression, the extension of electric service to farms of the United States went forward in 1930 with practically normal rapidity, 90,806 additional farms being provided with electricity during the year, an increase of 16.3 per cent.

According to a survey recently completed, California and New York lead in the number of farms now served, as well as in the number of newly electrified farms added last year. Among the states adding 3,000 or more farms in 1930, Alabama showed the highest percentage of increase, 40 per cent.

The number of electrified farms in the United States has risen from 166,140 in 1923 to 647,677 in 1930, a gain of 290 per cent in seven years.

That there is still a wide field for the future expansion of rural electrification is seen in the fact that in spite of the rapid progress made, only 10 per cent of American farms now have this service.

With continued co-operation in this movement by farm organizations, agricultural colleges, electric companies and the farmers themselves, progress will doubtless be even more swift in the next decade than it has been in the past, and the drudgery of farm life will be correspondingly reduced.

Many Reasons Why Fish Is Favored for Friday

The principle reason for eating fish on Friday is religious. Jesus was crucified on Friday, and many early Christians observed it as a weekly fast day. On fast days, people were expected to abstain from eating flesh meats. The prohibition did not include fish, hence fish came to be favored as a Friday dish. Pope Nicholas declared about 1,140 years ago that communicants of the Roman Catholic church must not eat meat on Fridays. Some Protestant churches have adopted the same rule, or sought to foster the same custom. The result is that there is a considerable demand for fish on Friday, creating a good market and bringing choice fish to the counters, so that many who are unfamiliar with church rules and customs eat fish on Friday because they feel that they can get the best fish at that time. Since the introduction of new methods of keeping and shipping fish, however, this is more a custom than a real reason. Christians favor fish as a fast-day dish because of New Testament allusions to fishermen and fishes, several of the disciples being fishermen, and the story of the loaves and fishes being among the most widely known in the Bible. Fish are also associated with the Resurrection because of the repast of fish caught after the Resurrection by disciples following the instructions of the Lord.

Scientists Baffled by Great Mystery of Life?

"What is your life?" asks St. James. He answers it thus: "It is even a vapor that appeareth for a little time and then vanisheth away." The life spoken of here is the individual existence, the mortal life, and not the general life, the life principle. Nevertheless, the definition is interesting and suggestive.

"Life, the shadow of death," so Swinburne says, but then he was a poet. Another poet sings of life as "a blunder and a shame." One of the ancients who held that there was no difference between life and death was asked why, in that case, he did not die. "Because," he replied, "it does make no difference." The final verse of the last Psalm reads: "Let everything that hath breath praise the Lord." This seems to identify life with breath, which surely is a "vapor," to use the word of St. James. Our scientists seem to have embarked on a daring and difficult enterprise when they attempt to create life artificially in the laboratory. There are few things that they will not undertake, few, indeed, in the investigation of which they have not won marvelous success. Perhaps life, its origin, and its nature are beyond them.—Indianapolis News.

Indian Arrows Varied

A complete Indian arrow is made up of six parts: Head, shaft, foreshaft, shaftment, feathering and neck. These differ in material form, measurement, decoration and assemblage according to locality and tribe. Arrowheads have three parts: Body, tang and barbs. There are two kinds of arrowheads, blunt and sharp. In the Southwest a sharpened foreshaft of hardwood serves for the head. Arctic and northwest coast arrows have heads of ivory, bone, wood or copper, as well as stone; elsewhere they are more generally of stone, chipped or polished. The head is attached to the shaft or foreshaft by lashing with sinew, by riveting or with gum.

"Clean Hands" in Law

There is a legal maxim, "He who seeks equity must come with clean hands." As explained in Bowman's Handbook that "a plaintiff who has been guilty of inequitable conduct in the same matter concerning which he asks relief against the defendant's inequitable conduct will be denied relief." An illustration cited is that a plaintiff who sues to restrain the defendant from infringing his trade mark will be denied relief where the trade mark is itself untruthful and misleading to the public. A somewhat similar maxim is, "He who seeks equity must do equity."

Workmen's Compensation

The first legislation on the subject of workmen's compensation in the United States was a co-operative insurance law in Maryland in 1902. However, this law was declared unconstitutional in 1904. The first compensation acts were passed in 1910, but several of them were held unconstitutional—notably that of New York, by the famous Ives decision. The New York constitution was then amended and another law passed. Congress in 1908 passed a law providing for a plan of compensation for accidents incurred by industrial employees of the United States.

Sinister Political Date

One of the most sinister dates in modern British politics is October 6. Have you ever seen the list? On October 6, 1881, Gladstone denounced Parnell, and on October 6, 1891, Parnell died. On October 6, 1896, Rosebery retired from the leadership of the Liberal party, and on October 6, 1909, he resigned the presidency of the Liberal league. On October 6, 1891, W. H. Smith died while leading the house of commons, and on October 6, 1903, Joseph Chamberlain opened his disastrous tariff reform campaign with his Glasgow speech.—London Mail.

A BOY HERO HONORED

An unprecedented honor came to a 13-year-old Colorado school boy the other day when he was a guest at the White House by special invitation of President Hoover.

He slept in the blue bedroom, which has been occupied at different times by hundreds of distinguished guests, including Lindbergh. He also witnessed the official reception of the King and Queen of Siam, and the great state dinner given for them.

He dined with the President and his family, was shown about the White House grounds and the city of Washington, and received every attention due a real hero, such as he has shown himself to be.

The boy is Bryan Untiedt, who for thirty-six hours fought to keep his twenty-one companions awake to prevent their freezing to death when a blizzard trapped them in a school bus near Towner, Colorado, a few weeks ago. He even shared his own clothing with them and suffered frozen hands and feet himself. In spite of his heroic efforts five died, including his own brother, but had it not been for his intelligence and great courage all might have perished before help reached them.

The full story of Bryan Untiedt's heroism is too long to relate here, but suffice it to say that no finer example of sheer grit and determination in the face of apparently hopeless odds has ever been displayed by anyone, old or young.

He richly deserved the recognition given him by the President and Mrs. Hoover, as well as the universal acclaim which his splendid heroism has called forth.

NEW FRENCH CITIZENS

The world-wide unemployment situation tends to focus attention upon immigration and emigration, particularly as respects labor, and the naturalization laws of various countries. Among European countries, France continues to attract immigrants in increasing numbers, according to recent official report.

During the first eleven months of 1930, France made a net gain of 44,154 new citizens through naturalization, as against 37,890 for the year of 1929. In the same period only 1,476 persons of French nationality sought to change their allegiance.

The neighboring countries of Italy, Switzerland, Luxemborurg, Belgium, and Spain supplied France with 74 per cent of her newly naturalized citizens last year. This circumstance is considered desirable by French authorities, since newcomers from countries so close at hand are more easily assimilated into the French nation.

Naturalization in France is surrounded by many precautions to assure the barring of undesirables, however. Searching examinations to determine the applicant's state of health, moral character, and so on are made by the authorities, and when deemed necessary the reputation and past hsitory of the petitioner in his country of origin are investigated.

In addition to gains in population through naturalization, it was announced last week that the birth rate in France now exceeds the death rate for the first time in seveal years, an announcement which was hailed with great satisfaction by the people of that country.

TICONDEROGA ANNIVERSARY

Early in the morning of May 10, 1775, the "Green Mountain Boys" of Vermont, numbering less than ninety, led by Ethan Allen, surprised and captured the British garrison at Fort Ticonderoga. Included in the capture were two hundred cannon which Henry Knox later dragged over the mountains to Boston, where they were used to good advantage by General Washington in his siege of that city.

In recalling the one hundred and sixty-fifth anniversary of this event, the division of information and publication of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission marks it as one of the significant dates to be commemorated in connection with the celebration of the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of George Washington.

The nation-wide observance of the First President's two hundredth birthday anniversary has been prepared by the national commission in charge to be the greatest commemoration of its kind ever held. All-inclusive in scope, the celebration provides for the participation of every man, woman and child in the nation. Programs are being prepared to be held in every schoolhouse, church, and meeting place in America. Extending even beyond the boundaries of America, it will include the citizens of the United States living abroad as well as the people of all foreign nations who wish to honor the memory of George Washington.

The spectacular attack on Ticonderoga occurred less than a month after the opening gun of the Revolutionary war was fired at Lexington. It was carried out by men who appreciated the grim significance of the event, and who were determined not to turn back until independence had been won. The spirit which actuated the attackers was clearly shown in their refusal to forsake the enterprise when Allen gave each one the opportunity to withdraw just before the attack was made.

When the Americans had forced their way into the fort, they proceeded to the quarters of the commandant, De La Place. Colonel Allen confronted the Briton with the demand for his surrender. According to Washington Irving in his "Life of Washington," La Place wished to know by what authority the demand was made, and received the now immortal reply: "In the name of Great Jehovah and the Continental Congress." Resistance appearing futile, the garrison surrendered and Ticonderoga passed into the possession of the Americans.

A LENIENT WIFE

How much personal freedom a husband and wife should permit each other is a question that has been the subject of much discussion both in public and private. It is suspected that a good many husbands grant their wives as little liberty as possible, while taking all they can get for themselves. And in a good many cases the wife adopts a similar attitude.

The grand prize for leniency to a husband, if such is entitled to a prize, would seem to be due to Mrs. Rhoda Hood, of Louisville, who gave her husband, James E. Hood, a card signed by her reading as follows:

"This is to certify that I hereby permit my husband to go where he pleases, drink what he pleases, and furthermore to enjoy the company of any lady or ladies he sees fit, as I know he is a good judge. I want him to enjoy life while he can, as I know he is going to be dead a long, long time."

Whether Mrs. Hood's attitude was a wise one is open to question, but it probably saved a lot of argument. Her card of manumission came to light when it was found in Hood's pocket after he had been killed by an automobile while walking alone and sober on a Baltimore street.

TILTING AT TRAINS

Don Quixote's tilting at windmills was hardly more foolish and much less disastrous than the habit of present day motorists who assault railroad trains.

Figures covering accidents at railroad crossings during a period of six months show that in 27 per cent of the cases the automobiles ran into trains, instead of trains running into the automobiles.

One railroad company reports that in a single year 500 of its crossing gates lowered to protect the public were run into and smashed by motorists. Another company checked the performances of 3,589 drivers while crossing its tracks. By actual observation it was found that of this number 2,907 failed to look either to the right or left before crossing; 602 looked in one direction only, while only 80 drivers looked both ways.

With such evidence of recklessness on the part of motorists before us, it is not difficult to understand why 32,000 persons were killed and 900,000 injured in automobile accidents last year.

Each Senator costs the taxpayers $38,876 a year. All above the $10,000 salary probably represents the amusement tax.

An optimist is one who believes the radio programs will be better some day.

SUPPLYING A NATION

Among American industries, electricity and gas rank third. The seventeen billion dollars invested in providing the nation with these two services is exceeded only by the investment in agriculture and the railroads.

Supplying the nation's needs with gas and electricity cannot be considered as two separate and distinct industries, they are twin services. They go hand in hand, supplementing each other in the home, workshop and factory. Combined, they supply the light, heat and power which properly are the products of a single industry.

Together they comprise the most potent force in the advancement of civilization, turning the wheels of industry, removing the loads from the backs of labor, making life easier and its burdens less arduous. As yet the public has only superficial knowledge of the electric and gas industry's operations, its development and policies.

The history of the electric and gas industries has been one of constant progress. Either or both are today available in practically every community in the United States. Approximately 42,000,000 customers are using them, and more than 1,000,000 customers are being added to this tremendous total each year.

In 1900 less than $500,000,000 was invested in electric light and power companies. In 1920, $4,100,000,000, and during the next ten years more than double that of the preceding twenty.

Today electric power and light represents an investment of approximately $11,800,000,000; manufactured gas $3,000,000,000, and the rapidly developing natural gas business brings the total capital investment in supplying light, heat and power to probably well in excess of $17,200,000,000.

In 1900 manufactured gas was used almost entirely for illuminating purposes, but in the next thirty years the gas industry saw greater development than before the advent of electricity. Today 90 per cent of its product is used for heating purposes.

BIG DAY FOR HORNSBY

Pittsburgh baseball fans witnessed one of the most sensational batting performances of all time the other day, when Rogers Hornsby of the Chicago Cubs hit three successive home runs and a single, driving in eight taliles to beat the home town's Pirates 10 to 6.

Hornsby's feat of batting three home runs in a single game has been duplicated by only three other players in the major leagues—by Reynolds of the Chicago White Sox last year, by Kelly of the New York Giants in 1923, and by Captain Anson of the Cubs in 1884.

For more than a decade Hornsby has been a batter of renown. He led the National League in batting six seasons in succession, 1920 to 1925, inclusive, and again in 1928. His season average of .424 in 1924 stands as the highest in either major league for 36 years. The only higher season average ever made in a major league was .438 by Duffy Lewis of Boston in 1894.

Hornsby was born in 1896. As manager of the St. Louis Cardinals he won the worlds' championship in 1926, defeating the New York Yankees four games to three. His record as a whole is one of the most brilliant in the history of the national game.

Anyone who has been in Central America can hardly help wondering what there is there to make folks want to fight over it.

FIRE ON THE FARM

During 1930, farmers of the United States suffered one of the greatest fire losses in agricultural history—a total of about $125,000,000, according to the National Fire Waste Council, as compared with an average of $100,000,000 in "normal" years.

This unusually heavy fire loss was attributed largely to the drought, which increased the common farm hazards such as highly combustible buildings, isolation from the protection of adequately equipped fire companies, and general lack of fire-quenching facilities.

Even so, the annual farm fire loss cannot be justified. Numerous studies have been completed and others are being made on how to reduce the waste. Many authoritative booklets, dealing with every phase of the agricultural fire problem, are available. The barrier in the way of prevention, of course, is the same on farms as in cities—the refusal of the individual to learn the fundamentals of fire prevention, and his carelessness in permitting unnecessary hazards to go uncorrected.

It can not be questioned that the annual fire waste has done much to prevent farm prosperity. Even if all property were covered by insurance—which it is not—no policy can compensate for destroyed buildings and crops, wasted time, devastated land. Every farmer should take steps to make his property as "fire-proof" as is humanly possible.

"You're an even dirtier little rat than I gave you credit for being. So unless I give you ninety thousand dollars you will put the experts from the internal revenue department on the trail of the estate, and they'll collect so much taxes illegally withheld—"

"They'll fine the estate—you know they will," Bunker screamed. "They can't do anything to your uncle, but they can fine his estate up to one hundred per cent. They won't have any pity on you."

"You forget that you are an accessory before the fact. In the eyes of the law you have committed a felony by aiding and abetting my uncle to defraud the government."

"I know. But when I turn state's evidence they won't do anything to me." Bunker laughed mirthlessly. "That's what immunity baths are for. They pay me for my information."

"Bunker, you're loathsome. Get out of my room. Quick! I don't like to rough-house a little old man like you, but if you're still standing there leering triumphantly at me thirty seconds from now I'll manhandle you. Scat, you polecat!"

Following Bunker's unceremonious departure, Elmer Clarke sat down to do some solid thinking. He had need to, for if Bunker's threat should not prove to be an idle one, he was liable to find himself in a most unenviable position.

"Well, one thing is certain," he decided. "If the collector of internal revenue, egged on by Bunker, should levy on the total residue of the estate, I'll be back, financially, where I was before Uncle Hiram died, but with this exception—I'll be out of a job. Well, I'll soon find another. My health is A-one again, so what the devil do I care for the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune, provided I do not have to wait too long to marry Nellie?

"Why, I almost forgot that I am mayor. I have got a job, after all, and it pays me one hundred dollars a month. Well, I've existed on less. Elmer, old settler, you're not licked at all."

He decided to await developments. It occurred to him that if Bunker really had such a club to swing he would have swung it most profitably on Uncle Hiram before the latter departed for that mysterious land where income taxes are not. He certainly would not swing it until he had collected his own legacy from the estate, for Bunker was too cunning to make such a maladroit move. Perhaps his threat had been a monumental bluff.

"I think this is a matter I should take up with McPeake," he decided, and forthwith called upon the lawyer. McPeake listened to the incredible tale with a growing disgust manifesting itself on his features.

"You're a shrewd judge of human nature, Mr. Clarke," he declared when Elmer had finished his recital. "Bunker is a rat. I am positive, however, that he is bluffing you. If he had had such a weapon to use on your uncle, he would have used it. Consequently, I think that the best thing to do is to ignore him and proceed with the distribution of the estate."

"Well, I'll not accept any money that doesn't belong to me, Mr. McPeake."

"That's all very fine, but wait until you know for a certainty that it doesn't belong to you. I have no apprehensions on the matter, Mr. Clarke. Remember, Bunker is an arrant coward."

"Well, perhaps you're right, but I do not think he is bluffing. I don't think he has the courage to bluff. I confess I'm afraid of him."

"Well, I'm not, and the first day he comes in here I'll have him on the carpet and shake him down. I'll write you the results of my inquisition."

So Elmer went on to New York. Five weeks later McPeake wrote him that the real estate had been sold, that all of the debts of the estate had been paid and that a final decree of distribution had been signed by the judge of the probate court. McPeake added that Elmer's share of the estate would amount to approximately $218,000.

Immediately upon receipt of this information Elmer came on to Muscatine and the day after his arrival he was to meet McPeake in the latter's office. "Not a peep out of our friend Bunker," he announced, coming at once to the subject closest to Elmer's heart. "I had him in my office and gave him a bad half hour, but could not get any admission from him. He talked vaguely of things he could do, but seemed disinclined to do them. I think he was bluffing."

"Has he received his legacy, Mr. McPeake?"

"I handed him his check ten minutes ago. Thought I might as well get rid of him before you arrived." McPeake reached into his desk and drew out a formal typewritten receipt with a check for $218,734.22 attached to it. "Sign here," he ordered—and Elmer signed and pouched his check.

Then he gathered up all of the papers and took his departure. The check he had received was on the First National bank, downstairs, so Elmer went into the bank first and approached the paying teller's window. "I wish you'd have this check certified," he said, and handed it through the grill work.

The paying teller took it and departed. Five minutes later he returned and handed the check back to Elmer uncertified. "Sorry," he said, "but a distraint warrant has been served on the bank by the local collector of internal revenue, and we are debarred from honoring any further checks on this account."

"I thank you," said Elmer politely and walked out. Up to McPeake's office he went. The client the latter had been expecting had not yet arrived and Elmer went at once into the lawyer's private office.

"Well, Bunker has made good," he announced. "I told you I thought he wasn't bluffing. He planned his coup so cleverly that he got his own check, rushed downstairs and cashed it just before the collector of internal revenue served warrant on the bank. The funds of the estate are all tied up until the government experts have gone over the books."

"Holy jumped-up Jehosaphat!" yelled Absolom McPeake. "No!"

"But yes!"

"I don't believe it!"

"Go downstairs and ask the paying teller of the First National bank. He'll enlighten you. I went down there and he enlightened me."

"The dirty dog!" McPeake raved. "The dirty little snake in the grass to do a thing like this!"

Elmer shrugged. "All I'm hoping is that the collector of internal revenue leaves me enough to pay my few debts. I owe the Pilarcitos Commercial Trust and Savings bank twenty thousand. If I get that much out of the wreck I'll be back where I started and in a month or two I'll be just as happy as if I had never been a millionaire." He smiled wanly. "You see I haven't got terribly accustomed to being a millionaire," he added. "Spending money is a fine art and I have never learned it. Cheer up, Mac. If I'd collected all of this inheritance and had got accustomed to living on a million-dollar scale, Bunker's action would have broken my heart."

"You are game," McPeake declared admiringly, and called for his secretary. "Get the collector of internal revenue on the line for me," he ordered.

Thereafter for five minutes he listened on the line while the collector of internal revenue talked. Silently McPeake hung up.

"Licked!" he croaked. "Licked to a frazzle!"

"All right, I'm licked," Elmer retorted calmly. "What interests me is to know how I was licked."

"Bunker went to the collector of internal revenue directly after you gave him your ultimatum and turned the real set of books and vouchers over to them, and for five weeks a corps of expert accountants has been experting them. The statute of limitations has run against the income tax returns for 1913, 1914, 1915, 1916 and 1917, but they have you nailed on the returns from then on. They have made up the tax returns for those years as they should have been made up had your uncle made an honest return, and the collector informs me that the estate owes the government two hundred and thirty-one thousand, nine hundred and four dollars and eight cents."

They looked at each other, and presently the slow, amused smile crept around Elmer's mouth. "Mac," he asked, "did you get your fee out of the estate before the crash?"

McPeake shook his head wearily.

"Then the joke's on you," Elmer declared, and stood up. "Tell you what you do," he continued. "You get hold of that collector, run down his accounting and, when you are convinced he is right and we haven't got a leg to stand on, you settle with him on the best basis you can.

"As for me, I'm out. I have neither the time nor the inclination to fight for anything except a living, and the longer I delay that assault the worse off I'll be. I'm about eight months behind the procession now and I'll have to hurry to catch up." He held out his hand. "Good-by, Mac, I'm on my way."

"Elmer, I'm terribly sorry." McPeake, friendliest of men, was calling him by his first name.

"Don't waste your sympathy, Mac. I'm one bird in this world who hates sympathy. I've never been able to use any. Uncle Hiram's money would have meant a great deal to the happiness of that girl I told you about, and for her sake I wish Bunker had never been born. But why repine? When the collector of internal revenue proves his case, hand him this with my compliments," and Elmer laid on McPeake's desk the check the latter had so recently handed him. He held out his hand. Goodby, Mac. Hope you get yours. You've worked for it—which is more than I did. You might write to me from time to time and tell me how you're coming along."

He shook hands and departed.

Back at his hotel, he packed his trunk and suitcase, telephoned downstairs for his bill and then lay down on his bed to wait for train time. At four o'clock he was homeward bound and three days later he dropped off the Del Monte Flyer at Pilarcitos and made his way on foot up to his house.

He was greeted enthusiastically by Benjy, his old hunting dog, and his colored retainer, Jasper. To the latter he handed the wages due him to date. "I'll not need you any more, Jasper," he announced. "I'm sorry. You're a good servant and faithful, but I can't afford you. I'll dine uptown tonight."

He left the amazed and disappointed Jasper staring after him, went to the telephone and called up Nellie at the bank.

"Elmer speaking, Nellie. I'm home—back home and broke. I'd like to take you out to dinner tonight—probably for the last time—and tell you all about it. Uncle Hiram's estate has melted like a dish of ice cream on a hot stove. Funniest tale you'll ever listen to, Nellie. Brace yourself for a laugh."

"Oh, Elmer dear! I'm so sorry!" Nellie's voice was pregnant with tears.

"Don't," he pleaded. "Please do not feel sorry for me, Nellie. Time enough for that when I begin feeling sorry for myself. I've assimilated the grandest thrashing any man ever assimilated, and I can still stand and see and think clearly. Yes, I've taken a thrashing, but I'm not down and out for the count. I've got all kinds of fight left in me yet—you wait and see."

"I'll Not Need You Any More, Jasper," He Announced, "I'm Sorry."

"Well," Nellie replied, "it's all terribly awful, of course, but for all that, I'm happy. You have come back to me and nothing else matters."

"I've come back to you, but not for you," he answered bitterly. "I'm not dog enough to ask you to share my poverty with me. Nellie, you must forget that I was ever selfish enough to ask you to marry me."

"We'll talk that matter over before we decide," she retorted. "Pick me up at the house at seven o'clock."

At seven o'clock Elmer called for Nellie and drove her out to Joe Angellotti's roadhouse for dinner. And there, between the soup and the nuts, he told her the tale of his vanishing million. When the story was done Nellie poked the tablecloth with the tines of her fork and was silent for about a minute. Then:

"What are you going to do, Elmer?"

"Anything at all that I can find to do, Nellie."

"But you're the mayor of Pilarcitos now—you're a trustee of the Union high school. Are you going to resign and leave Pilarcitos?"

"Not if I can make a decent living here. To resign and leave now would be equivalent to running away."

"But you'll be laughed to death, Elmer. Oh, you haven't any idea how cruelly you'll be twitted by the townspeople! It'll hurt terribly. I wouldn't blame you for leaving the town."

"I know. But I've stood some hurts in my day and I can stand more."

Nellie looked up at him with love unutterable in her brown eyes. "I adore you," she whispered.

Her simple, heartfelt declaration brought a mist to his eyes. "Please don't say it, Nellie," he pleaded. "I love you more than I'll ever love any woman again, but—you understand, don't you darling? I can't expect you to marry a pauper. I'll probably be a fat, middle-aged man before I'll have enough money to support you decently and—oh, please understand, Nellie! I want you so, but I'll not be selfish enough to ask you to wait."

"I understand thoroughly, dear. I do not expect you to ask me to wait and as a matter of fact I would not consent to wait. When I marry you I want some of the sweetness of life, not the sacrifice and the drudgery of never-ending poverty. I have my place in the bank and I—take me out of here, Elmer Clarke. I'm going to cry."

Elmer hurriedly paid his bill and they left the roadhouse. Five miles down the road they came to the first arc light on the outskirts of Pilarcitos. Nellie laid her soft little hand on Elmer's arm.

"Pull up under that arc light," she commanded, and Elmer obeyed. From her bag Nellie drew a sheaf of typewritten papers and handed them to Elmer. "Read!" she commanded.

"What is it, Nellie?"

"It's the final accounting of your Uncle Hiram's estate submitted to the court by the executor, Absolom McPeake. You didn't take time to read it when he submitted a copy to you, so he sent it on to me to show you."

"How do you—why—I didn't know he knew you—"

"Read it, booby!" Nellie cried. "You're so deliberate you drive me crazy. Read it."

So Elmer read it—and when he had done so he was aware that he was riding in an automobile with the next of kin of Benedict Catheron, who had received from the estate of Hiram Butterworth the sum of $1,078,000 in full satisfaction of that certain mortgage, et cetera. His face was very long and solemn as he folded the document and returned it to her.

"I'm happy you happened to be Benedict Catheron's granddaughter, Nellie," he said quietly. "You deserve every cent of it. God bless you! I hope you'll conserve it and enjoy it and never know the pinch of poverty again as long as you live."

"I told you I wouldn't wait to marry you until you had become fat and middle-aged and accumulated a few thousand dollars, Elmer. I meant what I said. Oh, my dear, I knew it all the time!—knew how little you were going to have left after everything should have been paid—and when I discovered, through McPeake, that you would escape with two hundred and eighteen thousand dollars I had a great curiosity to see how you would stand losing that. So I told McPeake I wanted you to think—oh, please forgive me, darling, but old Bunker was bluffing you all the time! So Mr. McPeake fixed it with the bank to tell you that story and then he pretended to have a long conversation with the collector of internal revenue—and here's your two hundred and eighteen thousand dollars and some odd, Elmer—and oh, you're so brave and simple and unspoiled, and I love you so much more now that I know how truly fine you are—kiss me, booby, kiss me, I say! Take me in your arms and tell me you love me. I want to hear you say it—over and over again, darling—and say you forgive me. I've bought out old Anse Moody's controlling interest in the bank and you're president and nobody is going to laugh at you. Oh, darling, you ought to know I wouldn't let anybody do that!"

"Don't!" he pleaded. "You don't know anything about it. That Doris Gatewood will make a laughing stock of me yet. She can't prove a thing, but she'll give me a lot of publicity."

"She'll not. I have a dictograph record of her conversation with you the night she and Colorado Charley called to blackmail you. Why, I'm the one who put them in jail so they could think it over quietly, and when they get out they'll leave the state on tickets furnished by me, or go to the penitentiary for conspiracy to blackmail you. I knew all about them long before you did."

"Then in heaven's name, why did you keep me in ignorance and let me suffer?" he asked.

Nellie laughed softly. "Oh, I had a silly idea you'd think ever so much more of me if I permitted you to have some experience of her!"

Elmer threw in his gears and the car glided down the highway. Presently he turned off into a lateral road and pulled up in the shadow of a line of eucalyptus trees. Very calmly he reached down, switched off the ignition and lights and then turned to Nellie.

"Now," he said soberly, "I'll kiss the most wonderful girl in all the world, and after that we're going to motor over to San Jose, get the county clerk out of bed, secure a license and get married. If I'm to stay in Pilarcitos and pool my fortune with yours, we might as well start now because—well, because—oh, Nellie darling, how can you love me so? What an ass I've been!"

Nellie's arms went around his neck. "Stop singing the national anthem of Siam!" she commanded. "You dear old booby!"

[THE END.]

Maronites Largest of Lebanon's Many Cults

Biblical Lebanon, Asia's only Christian state and the smallest one in the world, has seven different confessions among its 826,618 inhabitants, according to the last census. Despite mass emigration among people of their faith, Christians again maintain their majority. The largest group is the Maronites with 214,313 adherents. In addition there are 20,448 emigrants of this faith in the United States who still pay taxes to the homeland. They form one of the oldest Christian churches. Its history goes back as far as the Fourth century, retaining Aramaic as the church language. Since the Middle ages, the Maronites have recognized the pope, although they have a patriarch of their own. There are only 5,421 Protestants in the Lebanese republic. The ancient churches such as the Syrian Jacobite and the Assyro-Chaldean claim the majority of 11,000 church-goers classed among the minorities. Next to the Maronites in strength are the Sunnite Moslems with 136,040 and the Shiites with 113,536.

Nearly a score of the leading irrigation districts and canal companies diverting water from Kings River under what is called "the water-right indenture" have brought an injunction suit against the People's Ditch Company and the Corcoran Irrigation District to prevent them from asserted interferences with the administration of the "water master" employed to supervise the allotting of water. The complaint sets forth that the People's Ditch Company has failed to share in the losses in the river flow between the gauging station at Piedra and the Lemoore Canal and Irrigation Company's weir, and, therefore, has forced the other companies to take less than their rightful share of water. The suit was filed at Hanford in the Kings County Superior Court.

President Hoover has been petitioned by members of the Sacramento-San Joaquin River Problems Conference for abrogation of recent Department of Agriculture regulations shortening the open season for ducks in California by fifteen days. A resolution adopted by the permanent committee of the conference, in which it is charged that the regulations were imposed without consultation with either the California Fish and Game Commission or this state's representatives to the advisory committee of the Bureau of Biological Survey, had been forwarded to the President a short time ago. The resolution declares that no other parties to the migratory bird treaty, under which the regulatory powers are carried, have made any such regulations, thus placing California on an unequal basis and causing damage to its citizens.

THE THREE C'S OF ACCIDENT PREVENTION

The key to automobile accident prevention is in the hands of individual drivers. There is a point where even the best traffic laws become inoperative. At this point the individual must take up the work. Care, courtesy and common-sense—these are the three C's of accident prevention which are not covered by law.

The majority of accidents occur when they are violated. Each year such violations mean death to 30,000 people, to say nothing of a vast sum in property damage.

Last year, according to the Travelers Insurance Company, the largest single cause of accident was failure to give right-of-way—which accounted for 31 per cent of all mishaps and 15 per cent of all deaths. Foolhardiness, coupled with discourtesy, is strewing death along the highways. The driver who cuts in and out of traffic—who drives on the wrong side of the road—who drives at an excessive speed—is a menace to the life and property of all who use the public roads.

Traffic laws should be improved and modernized to the greatest possible degree. But after that is done, the rest is principally up to the individual driver. And he will decide whether or not our horrible toll in human life increases or decreases.

Psychologists doubtless invented the phrase "delusion of grandeur" to describe that truck driver complex.

"Big Bill" Thompson had a few laughs during the recent Chicago mayoralty campaign even if he did get beaten to a frazzle. One big laugh was at the expense of the Chicago Tribune, from whose office someone obtained a copy of the obituary notice it had prepared when it was thought Thompson was near death last November. The notice was quite complimentary, so Thompson had it widely published as a reply to the Tribune's campaign attacks. His campaign managers said the Tribune was willing to tell the truth about him if he were dead.

There is an old saying to the effect that no one wants to buy a lawsuit, but J. E. Betis, of Vancouver, seems to have done worse than that by buying a funeral. A trunk purchased by him for $14 at a sale of unclaimed express packages was found to contain the embalmed body of a man.

COUNTY'S MILK RATED HIGH IN TEST BY STATE

A surprise milk scoring contest on San Mateo county's milk supply has just been completed by a representative of the State Dairy bureau, and the average score of all milk sold in the cities and unincorporated areas was found to be 95.9 per cent. This rating is the highest ever obtained in this county and represents an increase of 1.1 per cent over the previous contest.

"This is a high rating and speaks well for the supervision given the local milk supply," said A. W. Hayes, market milk specialist, who conducted the scoring contest just concluded. "Milk scoring is a part of the service extended by the state department of agriculture to local departments where milk is graded and means that through the county-wide milk inspection service the grade on the bottle cap is backed by the state.

"Credit for the uniformly high quality of the local milk supply is due to the co-operation of the dairy interests with the county milk inspection department under the direction of Dr. F. Holmes Smith, health officer, and J. J. Garland, milk and dairy inspector."

The results are as follows:

Grade A, pasteurized—Rating between 95 and 100 per cent: Dairy Delivery Company (double cap); Golden State Company, Ltd., (double cap); Millbrae Dairy (double cap); Dairyland Products, Inc.; Dairy Delivery Company; Spreckels Creameries, Inc.; Santa Carlos Creamery.

Rating between 90 and 95 per cent—Witt's Dairy; Jersey Farm Dairy; Minehan Bros' Dairy.

Rating between 85 and 90 per cent—Sheehan's Creamery.

Certified—Rating between 95 and 100 per cent—Sleepy Hollow Dairy; Meadowbrook Dairy.

Guaranteed raw—Rating between 95 and 100 per cent—Hobart Farm Dairy; Palo Alto Dairy.

Rating between 90 and 95 per cent—Gilman's Ayrshire Farm.

Grade A, raw—Rating between 80 and 85 per cent: Hillcrest Dairy.

WEAR A BUDDY POPPY

Have you forgotten those fields
Where poppies grow?
Have you forgotten the crosses
There—row on row?
Have you forgotten the torch
Which dead hands flung?
Have you forgotten the "blesse"
No longer young?
Have you forgotten
The symbol of poppies red?
Have you forgotten the broken
The maimed—the dead?
Have you forgotten that on some
hospital bed,
Racked with pain, lies a soldier
Who fought and bled—
For whose comfort we're selling
These poppies red?
No? Then please buy a poppy!

"STREET SCENE" COMING TO THE GEARY THEATRE

Twenty-four hours on a sidewalk in New York and you have "Street Scene," Elmer Rice's famous drama of city life, which Sid Grauman presents at the Geary Theatre, San Francisco, for a two week engagement, commencing Monday evening, May 18, with the original cast that played two years in New York City. "Street Scene" has been acclaimed the most wonderful play of this day and generation. It combines wide popular appeal with fine literary quality.

A typical New York bronstone front apartment building is the slide upon which the dramatist has focused his microscope. You are permitted to stand at the front door and savor the essence of life as it shuttles to and fro from its work, or lounges about its nocturnal recreations. The play teems with action, revealing the drama, not of one or two lives, but of half a hundred. There are fifty definite characters in the cast—one of the largest casts ever seen on the legitimate stage.

Emma Jones, once seen will never be forgotten; she is the incorrigible gossip, blind to the defects of her own family, who shakes her dust-cloth out of the third-story window in a spirit of sanctimonious cleanliness and takes her dog, Queenie, for a walk with the airs of a duchess. Anna Maurrant, too, is etched indelibly on one's memory; the unfathful wife, whose story makes one of the most exciting second acts ever staged. Nearest to the heart, of course, of all the widely varied characters who throng this fascinating drama is Rose, young and lovely as her name, whose love story is as a breath of springtime flowers, and who meets the disaster of her fathers' home with fine spiritual heroism.

Page after page would be required to set forth in detal the story of "Street Scene." It encompasses love and hate, birth and death, humor and excitement—all the phases of life itself.

The original cast of seventy-five includes Erin O'Bren-Moore, Mary Servoss, Horace Braham, George Humbert, David Landau, Maude Fealy, Ann Kostant, Millicent Green, Tom Manning, Beulah Bondi, Max Monter, John Qualen and others of note.

IN A NUTSHELL

Thirty years ago the population of the United States was 81,000,000, and the average person contributed $19.39 in taxes to suport government.

In 1928, the last year for which complete official statistics are available, the population was 120,000,000, and the per capita tax had increased to $105.20. And now Senators are figuring how to raise income tax rates to cover the $500,000,000 treasury deficit that followed the last Congress.

Here is the tax situation in a nutshell. It should give the public something to think about.

SPLINTERS

From the H. H. Smith Lumber Yard

VOLUME 4 FRIDAY, MAY 15, 1931 NUMBER 42

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinty by H. H. Smith and Employees.

"Say, Jones, there ain't no difference between 'satisfied' and 'contented' is there?"

"Waal, ah's satisfied dat Sam Jackson is goin' wid my gal, but I'll be doggoned if I'se contented about it. Does that answer yo' question?"

Pompous Physician (to a man plastering a defective wall): "The trowel covers up a lot of mistakes—what?"

Workman: "Yes, governor—and so do the spade."

Spring usually finds you confronted with a certain amount of necessary repair work around your home. If we can be of any service to you, please call on us.

"Are you in favor of women taking part in public affairs?"

"It's all right if you really want the affairs public."

Turn About

A kind hearted gentleman saw a little boy trying to reach the door bell. He rang it for him, then said: "What now, my little man?"

"Run like hell," replied the boy. "That's what I'm going to do."

American Block and ABERDEEN — the Coal that satisfies.

Bill: "I miss the old cuspidor since it's gone."

Jack: "You missed it before. That's why it's gone."

"I'll give you three days to pay your rent."

"Then I'll take New Year, Easter and July 4th."

"A good thing to remember,
And a better thing to do,
Is work with the construction gang
Not with the wrecking crew."

We carry a complete line of Bass-Hueter Paints.

What a world! By the time you are important enough to take two hours for lunch, the doctor limits you to a glass of milk.

It's rather odd when the stock broker fails to come out even.
